The long-held belief has been that our canine companions see it as dark blue, light blue, gray, light yellow, darker yellow (almost brown) and very dark gray. Basically, they see the colors of the world as yellow, blue and gray. This was documented in brilliantly conducted research by the clinical ophthalmologist Dr. Jay Neitz in 1989.

Many of the dogs and cats are created with a few simple lines and splodges of colour that I think any artist, even one as poor as me, could emulate. Also important is the fact that these are not anatomically perfect illustrations, but interpretations of what the cats and dogs look like made with techniques budding artists can create for themselves.

But can color affect your dog? The first step in answering that question is to know what colors dogs see. Dogs do see colors, but the colors they see aren't as vivid or as many as we see. Most experts agree that while they can't see reds and greens, dogs do see most other colors — including blacks, whites, grays, yellows and blues.
